To Standpipe Virginia Poultry

Plans for re-producing for the Virginia poultry raiser the benefits that the State names California and Florida have given fruit growers in those states were revealed here Friday when poultry producers and marketing specialists met to formulate a basis for the marketing of Virginia broilers and fryers with standard State branding, it was announced by William R. Wright, Chesterfield County poultry producer and president of the Virginia State Poultry Federation.

The meeting took place at the farm of Mr. Wright, located a short distance from Richmond on the Broad Branch Road. It was attended by Walter G. Stout, New York marketing specialist, representing the merchandising machinery of the movement; Herman Betman, representing metropolitan sales directors of the Virginia Division of Markets; Nelson A. Louck, poultry marketing specialist of the Virginia Division of Markets; Harvey S. Clapp, president of the Agricultural Conference Board of Virginia; John R. Hutcheson, director of extension, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Hugh Farrell, Gloucester County poultry producer.

Dr. Wright's packing plant, which proved to the satisfaction of the experts present, was prepared to meet the demands of the New York market for a standardized high quality product under a definite brand that would bring considerably higher prices than those which local producers now receive.

Mr. Wright's plant under tentative plans for an organized movement to market Virginia poultry as such, will be used for packing his poultry and that of others who meet the standard requirements. Eventually the organizers expect to see packing plants springing up as a part of the movement in all parts of the State, all marketing their products under a Virginia brand. This will assure a stable high priced market and make it possible for Virginia poultry men to increase the volume and the profitability of their business, it was pointed out.

Dr. Wright said he considered the movement of great significance, coming at a time when farmers of the Old Dominion are being forced, through the economic situation thrust upon them, to manufacture their grain into meat in order to receive an increased return competitive with the Middle West. This State, he said, has 170,000 poultry men, or more than any other State. One per cent of this number manufactures 15 per cent of the poultry meat. The fact that there are approximately 174,000 farmers, then, raising about 85 per cent of the poultry shows the way in which the farmers are being forced by competition from outside the State to turn their acreage to poultry in order to make a living out of their land. It is a large opportunity to increase their poultry output, making Virginia the largest producer.

DR. HUGO ECKENER TO GET GOLD MEDAL

Awarded in Recognition of His World Flight.

Washington.—The National Geographic Society announced the award of a gold medal for the flight of Dr. Hugo Eckener of Germany, who flew from London to New York in the airship Graf Zeppelin, in the month of October, 1929.

Notification of the award was communicated to Dr. Eckener through the German embassy at Washington. Dr. Eckener has called that he will come to Washington in March, at which time the medal will be formally presented to him at a meeting of the society's members at the society.

Byrd and Lindbergh Among Medalists.

The presentation ceremony will be similar to those occasions upon which Commander Richard E. Byrd was given the medal for his flight to the North pole by airplane, and when Col. Charles A. Lindbergh received the society's medal for his flight from New York to Paris.

At these occasions a presentation of the medals was made on behalf of the society by President Coolidge and the society's president, Commander Richard E. Byrd, was given the medal for his flight to the North pole by airplane, and when Col. Charles A. Lindbergh received the society's medal for his flight from New York to Paris.

YOUTH FINDS PAL IN "JOVIAL" GHOST

Lad Said to Enjoy Spirit's Companionship.

London.—A jovial ghost who obligingly produces money from thin air, and who is the constant companion of a ten-year-old boy who lives in Poona, India.

The story was related before the National Laboratory of Psychological Research by Miss Helen Kohn, a B. A. of London university. The boy, said Miss Kohn, is her young nephew, Damsel Kohn, who was adopted by Miss Kohn's sister when he was four.

The youngster is coming to England soon, and the National Laboratory is arranging to have a committee of reputable London doctors investigate his ghostly companion.

"Sometimes," said Miss Kohn, "the manifestations are harmless and at other times definitely destructive. There was a time when it seemed that this mysterious spirit was making a determined attempt on the boy's life."

"Things were smashed so rapidly with a human explanation, that Damsel had to be fed by hand and all glass objects had to be removed. As the child moved through the room he was surrounded by broken glass, and scattered light bulbs, particularly chairs, to which the spirit appeared to have a special aversion."

"Once Damsel put out some fruit for his ghost. In a few moments it had disappeared and later the child was found from nowhere bearing the marks of teeth."

"Another time a five rupee note suddenly appeared in the air in the middle of a dinner party. Nobody took it and it melted and disappeared in a trunk. It disappeared and was never found."

Will Spend $7,800,000 For Bird Conservation

Washington.—A total of $7,800,000 will be expended under authorization of the migratory bird conservation act, of which $200,000 has been provided for the fiscal year ending in June, 1930, and $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending in June, 1931, and $5,600,000 for the fiscal year ending in June, 1932, and $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending in June, 1933, and $1,000,000 for the fiscal year ending in June, 1934, and for each succeeding fiscal year.

Before proposed areas are definitely settled on as sanctuaries for the protection of the migratory birds, the Department of Agriculture, the commission consisting of the secretary of the interior, and two members, each from the senate and house of representatives must approve the selection.

Under the act establishing the bird reservations, provision is made for the maintenance and improvement of the areas. The establishment of the sanctuaries and the administration of the program in which bird lovers have been actively interested.

Radcliffe, Smith Girls Cling to Short Skirts

Boston.—The long skirt dictum of the Paris stylists has been adopted by Wellesley college girls for both day and evening gown, but not at Radcliffe or at Smith. The girls students of Cambridge and Northampton wear the longer garments with raised waistline at evening affairs, but refuse to be coerced by Paris fashion makers into giving up the freedom of the short skirt for daytime and the street wear.
